

Nationwide MPO Jumper Companies

Article Overview

Key U.S. companies supplying MPO/MTP fiber optic jumpers include FS, Siemon, Amphenol, Belden, Furukawa, and Tripp Lite, offering high-density, low-loss, and plug-and-play solutions for data centers and telecom networks.

Leading MPO Jumper Providers in the U.S.

FS (Fiberstore) – FS offers a wide range of MTP®/MPO jumpers suitable for 40G, 100G, and 400G networks. Their products support seamless migration to higher data rates in multimode systems and are designed for high-density cabling in data centers . Siemon – Siemon provides MTP jumpers that connect MTP trunk backbones to active equipment. Their compact 2mm RazorCore cable design reduces pathway congestion and improves airflow. They offer Base-8, Base-12, and Base-16 versions, customizable in length and configuration . Amphenol – A major manufacturer of MPO/MTP fiber optic jumpers, Amphenol supplies high-density, low-loss patch cords suitable for enterprise and telecom applications . Belden – Belden produces MPO/MTP jumpers with standardized interfaces, high return loss, and low insertion loss, supporting high-speed fiber optic transmission systems . Furukawa – Furukawa offers MPO/MTP jumpers designed for high-density cabling, with bend-insensitive fibers and plug-and-play connectivity . Tripp Lite – Tripp Lite provides MPO/MTP fiber optic jumpers for data centers and network infrastructure, emphasizing fast deployment and reliable performance . Other notable U.S. suppliers include Cablesys, EFB-Elektronik, Warren & Brown, Complete Connect, and ICC, which provide MPO/MTP jumpers for various high-capacity and high-speed applications .
