

Price of Rainproof Distribution Box Cover

Article Overview

Rainproof covers for distribution boxes typically range from $10 to $50 for household or small circuit boxes, with industrial-grade options costing $50 to $200 or more depending on size and material.

Household and Small Circuit Boxes

For residential or small 5-way circuit distribution boxes, plastic rainproof covers made of high-grade polypropylene (PP) are common. These covers are durable, weather-resistant, and suitable for protecting household circuit breakers. For example, the DOITool protective cover for a 5-way circuit box is available on Amazon, generally priced around $10-$20 depending on seller and shipping options .

Industrial and Outdoor Enclosures

For larger or industrial applications, IP65-IP68 rated waterproof distribution boxes provide robust protection against rain, dust, and UV exposure. These enclosures are often made from ABS or polycarbonate and may include DIN rail configurations. Prices for these boxes, including rainproof covers, typically start at $50 for compact models and can exceed $200 for larger or custom configurations .

Rain Hoods and Drip Shields

If you already have a distribution box and need an additional rainproof layer, rain hoods and drip shields are available. These are mounted on top or sides of existing enclosures to deflect water and prevent moisture ingress. Prices for these accessori...
