

Recommended Direct Sales from Optical Cable Manufacturers

Article Overview

For direct procurement of optical cables, top manufacturers include Corning, Prysmian Group, Sumitomo Electric, YOFC, and Furukawa Electric, with sourcing options through factory-direct channels or verified B2B marketplaces.

Leading Factory-Direct Manufacturers

- Corning Incorporated – Holds ~30% of the global fiber optic market, with IEC-certified production facilities in the US, Europe, and Asia. Ideal for high-volume orders, typically requiring minimums of 50,000 meters, offering single-mode and multimode fibers for telecom and data center applications .
- Prysmian Group – Italian-based global leader in cable systems, with operations in over 50 countries. Offers both energy and telecom fiber solutions, suitable for large-scale infrastructure projects .
- Sumitomo Electric & Furukawa Electric – Japanese manufacturers with strong APAC distribution networks, providing G652D and G657A single-mode fibers and certified to IEC and JIS standards. They are well-suited for high-performance data center and FTTH deployments .
- YOFC & ZTO Fiber Cable – Chinese factory-direct suppliers offering cost-competitive solutions for bulk procurement, especially for emerging markets and government-backed broadband projects. They provide pre-terminated drop cables and high-volume FTTH solutions .
